Douglas & McIntyre, an imprint of D&M Publishers Inc., has sold Basque language rights to Wade Davis's book Light at the Edge of the World: A Journey Through the Realm of Vanishing Cultures, to the Universidad del Pais Vasco (University of the Basque Country Press) in Bilbao, Spain. The deal was arranged without an agent by Kim Mancini, Rights & Permissions Associate at D&M. A Serbian edition of the book, published by Izdavacka Preduzece Kisa, was released in October, 2008.

Wade Davis has traveled the world for more than thirty years, studying indigenous life in places as remote and diverse as the Canadian Arctic, the rain forests of Borneo and the Amazon, and the surreal cultural landscape of Haiti. His travels have taught him that many of these cultures are in danger of losing their way of life. In Light at the Edge of the World, Davis's evocative text looks at the "ethnosphere" – the diversity of ways of thinking and living that traditional cultures have to teach us about our place in the world.

For additional territories contact Kim Mancini at kimm@dmpibooks.com.

WADE DAVIS has degrees in anthropology and biology as well as a PhD in ethnobotany from Harvard University. He is currently explorer-in-residence at National Geographic. He divides his time between Washington, DC, and British Columbia's Stikine Wilderness.
